little months little smokes and oblivion in a wool dress a door opens tenderly near a wall where the wind is born near the jolly garden where saints and angels are afraid of the seasons the alleys have no names they are the hours or the years I stroll leisurely dressed in a cement overcoat and a hat of black straw

I don't remember if it's nice out I walk smoking and I smoke walking easily

every once in a while I tell myself
 it's time to stop the songs are songs and the days days

I no longer have one shred of respect for myself but I see hoodlums who smoke the same cigarettes as me and who are just as stupid as me I'm pretty content whithout really knowing why it doesn't suffice to speak of the sun the stars

the sea and rivers

blood eyes hands it is necessary quite often to speak of other things we know that there are very beautiful countries with very handsome men with no less charming women but all that isn't really the dizzying void which rings and bays makes the head bow

we look and we see again many other things which are always the same

I read in the stars the good will of my friends in a river I love one hand

I listen the flowers sing there are the goodbyes of birds a cry falls like a fruit my God my God

 I will be accordingly always the same

my head in my hands and my hands in my head
